Field visit to Nazira Beel, a closed Wetland of Nazira Block,

Sivasagar District

Overview of the program

Type of Program: Extension and outreach Related to: Awareness and Extension Date: 02.02.2024 Organized by: Department of Zoology in collaboration with IQAC, 11Assam Girls (I) Coy NCC, and 49 Assam Naval Unit, Gargaon College. Resource person: Dr. Anurag Kashyap, Assistant Professor, Department of Zoology, Gargaon College Related to: Awareness and Extension Number of Participants: 40

Overview of the Programme

The Department of Zoology In collaboration with IQAC and NCC (Army and Navy) Gargaon College organized an extension activity to emphasize the importance of wetlands for cultural significance, water purification, biodiversity, and flood management. The outreach program was carried out to study the existing biodiversity of Nazira Beel, a wetland near Nazira town, its current threats, and our contribution to its sustenance. Faculty members from the Departments of Zoology and Chemistry, Gargaon College, Dr. Pimily Langthasa, Dr. Pakiza Begum, and Dr. Anurag Protim Das of Gargaon College organized the activity, which involved all of the student participants traveling to the wetland. The lecturers emphasized how important wetlands are to improving our quality of life. The students were also explained how guard against flooding, maintain wetlands clean water, conserve biodiversity, particularly that of native fish and bird species, and offer recreational opportunities all of which are critical to the well-being and prosperity of humankind. The outreach program was attended by a total of 40 students.

Rationality of the Programme

Wetlands, are believed to be the last remaining freshwater bodies on Earth, with the exception of the permanent rivers. World Wetland Day is observed annually on February 2nd to promote awareness and educate people about the benefits of wetlands for both humans and the environment. On this day in 1971, the international treaty known as the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands was adopted with the goal of advancing the preservation and sustainable use of wetlands. Wetlands provide a wide range of commercial, recreational, and ecological interests. In addition to housing a multitude of organisms, they also retain surface water, reduce erosion, trap pollutants and their toxic residues, support a variety of fish, produce floods, fuel, and fibre. Through the absorption of wave energy, they also help to minimise the severity of floods. Assam is home to a large number of wetlands locally known as "beels". Wetlands store and filter water, protect people from flooding, and are home to a wide variety of plant and animal species. So, it is imperative that we study wetlands and protect them.

Gargaon College organizes extension activity to celebrate World Wetlands Day

OUR CORRESPONDENT .

SIVASAGAR, Feb 4: An extension programme was organized by the Depart-ment of Zoology and NCC (Army and Navy) Gargaon College in association with IQAC to highlight the value of wetlands in terms of biodiversity, water purification, flood control, and cultural significance. The 2nd of February each year marks World Wetland Day to raise awareness and learn about the importance and value of wetlands for people and the planet. It marks the date of the adoption of the Ramsar their conservation and Convention on Wetlands in 1971, an international treaty aimed at promoting the conservation and sustainable use of wetlands. The theme for World Wetland Day, 2024 is 'Wetlands and Human Wellbeing'. Dr. Sabyasachi Mahan-ta, an eminent academician and principal of Gargaon College, appreciated the efforts of the organizers in carrying out the extension activity. In his speech, Dr. Mahanta highlighted the importance of the wetlands and stressed the need for awareness creation. Assistant Pro Awareness creation. Assistant Professors from Gargaon College, Dr. Pimily Langthasa, Dr. Paki-za Begum, and Dr. Anurag Protim Das. took the lead in organizing the pro-gramme where all the student participants travelled to a wetland in the vicinity of Nazira town. The faculty members highlighted the critical role wetlands play in enhancing our lives. They further explained to the students how wetlands contribute to flood protection, clean water, conserva- /revive and restore those wet-tion of biodiversity, especially native fish and avian diversity, and recreational opportunities, all of which are essential for human health and prosperity. The wetlands are the last refuge for many endemic and rare native fish and serve as breeding grounds. It is a call on an entire generation to take proactive action for wetlands by investing hu-man, financial, and political capital to save the wetlands from vanishing. Therefore, the faculty members focused on the dire need to 0 lands that have been degraded. The people who live in KO the villages around the wet-land are directly or indirect-Siz seit ly dependent on the wetland and its resources. Various birds have been seen in the ky ter wetland visited by the parat ticipants of the programme. However, the most disheart-Ind ening fact is that some plasco tic sources have made their way into the wetland. The resource persons shed light ate on topics related to natural zu resources, and through this programme, the participants learned about the imporpe fri BI tance of wetlands.
